Pertaining to

FEBRUARY 15-16, 1978

Sponsored by

ABOUT THE SYMPOSIUM: Conversion to new sources of energy and expansion of traditional sources promise to introduce new occupational health problems. Nuclear energy, with its necessary controls, will undoubtedly be expanded, and various chemical substitutes for petroleum-based fuels will be developed. The manufacture of many new energy-saving devices will introduce new processes and exposures. Gasification, liquefaction, and solvent refining of coal will bring about unfamiliar exposures, and it has been said that 100,000 more miners will be needed to increase coal production by two-thirds, thus multiplying even the existing known hazards.

WHO SHOULD ATTEND: This seminar is designed to acquaint management with the potential threats to the health of workers so that they can be met and dealt with before they create an emergency situation, providing they are anticipated and adequate preventive steps are taken. Presidents, vice presidents, occupational health physicians, hygienists, and all others having responsibilities for the health of the worker will benefit greatly from hearing these presentations and participating in the discussion.

REGISTRATION: Complete and return the registration form along with fee. All registrations will be confirmed.

FEE: IHF Members $170.00
