Q And what percentage -- did Dr. Selikoff, in his studies, report on various asbestos-related diseases?

A He did. He reported on many of them.

Dr. Selikoff and his group have followed a group of insulation workers, 17,800 individuals since about 1962, and they have published data on this group of individuals, over the years, with respect to what type of diseases these individuals have developed, and what type of diseases they have died from. And there is a tremendous amount of information on that at the present time.

Q What have they found as it relates to the disease of mesothelioma?

A What they found is, if you look at the deaths in that group of people, approximately at that time 11 percent, which would be about -- 10 to 11 percent of the insulators have died from the disease mesothelioma, which means that those people who have died in that group, one out of 10, have died from mesothelioma.
