...ordinated in the Pacific theater of operations, and Lieutenant General Jacob L. Devers, commander of the second armored corps.

In an interview, General Devers said he had previously predicted that Rommel would be forced out of Africa by the end of April and that he was inclined to stand by the prediction, even though unbelievably bad weather had slowed down the allied advance.

...was a distant myth. So Congressman Disney gave a side-splitting description of the frank, eccentric, "Big Breeze" Rumi. Quoting Collier's Disney said:

"He laughs his big, bass laugh at quips about his brilliant plumage and casually mentions the fact that in the country he wears pastels—an orchid corduroy jacket
