WALL SCREEN

Exposed pipes can be screened with wallboard nailed to same point as walls.

den or bathroom may be hidden by painting stripes on a board that is set up to conceal them. Make an easel back board or a tall wallboard screen to conceal the pipes. The board may be painted so that it matches the color of the wall behind it or harmonizes with it. Stripes may be carried out on the wallboard as well as the wall. If there is space behind the wallboard it may even be used for storage.

"Three different paint types may be combined for a still impressional effect, using three complementary tones of the same color. The idea is to paint stripes across a room in three separate shades, starting with the darkest tone and lightening it in two other shades.
