YOUTH OF 17 FACES CHAIR

TULSA, Okla., Oct. 19—At the age when most boys are trying out for high school basketball teams or having their first "puppy love," Ted Cole, 17, is steeling his nerves to die in the electric chair for robbery with a gun.

The boy avowed his guilt yesterday before Judge Paul Yager, who assessed the death sentence, provided by Oklahoma law for robbery with firearms.

"You may have the rest of the year to prepare yourself to die," Judge Yager said. The date of the execution was set for next December 31, New Year's Eve.

Calmly and straightforwardly, the youth told his story yesterday. He said two 19 year old companions aided him in lining up a truck driver, the cashier and three women employes of a bottling plant here at the threat of revolvers three months ago.

The trio forced their victims to hand over their money and jewelry, young Cole said. They got $400 in all.

His companions, Morris Quinn and Billy Wendell, accused of aiding in the robbery, are awaiting hearing.
