mesothelioma of the pleura.

Q Do you have an opinion, again, with reasonable medical certainty, as to what the cause was of his malignant mesothelioma?

A Yes.

Q And what is that opinion, Doctor?

A The cause of the malignant mesothelioma was his occupational exposure to asbestos.

Q Now, assume that Mr. Grewe worked as an automobile mechanic from the mid '50s to 1957 to 1992, and as part of his work that he was exposed to asbestos-containing dust which he inhaled when he performed removal, repair and installation of brake linings and disc pads, and that those products, some of those products were supplied by Ford Motor Company which contained approximately 40 to 60 percent chrysotile asbestos.

And also assume that part of that time his exposure resulted from work sanding, scoring and grinding new Ford brakes and linings and disc pads prior to their installation on the vehicle.