Kaylo Cartons

Last week, Joe Mumbower and I visited C.P.O. concerning the inauguration of a carton testing program to see what can be done package-wise about reducing Kaylo breakage in shipment, on job sites, and, for that matter, in our own warehouse. After reviewing the problem with them briefly, it was decided that their first efforts would be devoted to the Tri-Seg line, which, as you all know, has been giving us the most trouble. This will necessarily mean shipping small quantities of cartons and packaged ware to C.P.O. over the period of their tests.

For your information, Larry Finn from this department will be assigned to this project and will from time to time issue bulletins and finally a Packaging Manual as improvements and final specifications are settled on.

I might mention, also, that in this program we plan to test competitive materials as well as our own with respect to outer packaging, inner packaging, canvas, and general quality.

Very truly yours,

Bruce F. Trumm
C & S Manager
