While attending a PCB conference at Durham, North Carolina on December 20 and 21, I was approached by a Dr. Charles H. Powell, Office of Research and Standards Development, National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health, Rockville, Maryland, regarding the possibility of a visit by him and members of his staff to the W. G. Krummrich Plant to look over our PCB unit.

Dr. Powell and his staff have been assigned the responsibility for developing OSHA standards and he indicated the PCB unit could serve as a model. He claimed he has been at the Krummrich Plant as an employee and was familiar with the plant.

Recognizing the potential problems, I was non-committal and indicated I would look into the plant's policy regarding plant visits.

I believe Dr. Powell is determined to visit the plant and will eventually call someone in Monsanto seeking permission to visit.
