Fong Wan, the Herb Doctor, Specializing in Herbs from the Orient, has been hailed into court by the Special Agents of the Medicine; his company's mail has been restricted, his herbs have been condemned as being without curative qualities and worthless; his method of healing with herbs has been pronounced a fraudulent scheme by the authorities, when at the trial their own physician witnesses were forced to admit many cures were made by the Fong Wan herbs.

Both chemists and professors of pharmacology from two leading universities have testified that certain herbs possess traces of alkaloids, tannin, starch, saponin, emodin and pectin. They have also admitted that while they possess no knowledge of the properties of herbs, yet they have known of cases in which ephedrin, which is an extract from the Chinese herb "ma huang," has relieved asthma, and of cases in which digitalis, which is an extract from foxglove root, has been beneficial to the heart.

The effects of the odor, the taste, the strength, the color and the action of the herbs on the head and on the extremities of the body are absolutely unknown to them. Neither do they know that numerous herbs, though light in weight, possess great strength and when boiled in water, constitute a marvelous remedy for the relief of congestion in the cavities of the head.

In 1925 an Anti-Herb Bill was introduced into the California State Assembly. People of all classes attacked Fong Wan in all sorts of ways, but he merely laughed at them, for he knew that those who had arrayed themselves against him had done so either by reason of jealousy of his success or because they were as ignorant with regard to the real value of herbs as he had been when he was a foolish young boy addicted to queue-pulling. He therefore sympathized with their ignorance and did not blame them for causing him so many hardships, especially as he was living in a foreign land where the Science of Herbal Remedies was both so new and so vaguely understood.

Fong Wan is happy to say that thousands of people have gained speedy relief by drinking his herbs and that only about 15% to 20% of the cases have required more than a brief period of treatment.

Marvelous Results Derived From Fong Wan Chinese Herbs

Have been testified before the Federal Trade Commission at San Francisco, California, in January, 1940. Numerous witnesses, at the Commission hearing, who had been told by their physicians that they had Tumors, Low Blood Pressure, Hardening of the Arteries, Angina Pectories, Heart Trouble, Colitis, Lead Poisoning, Eczema, Ulcers of the Stomach and Intestines, Blood Poisoning, Paint Infection, Prostate Trouble, Chronic Cough and sores of nine years' standing, told of being relieved and health restored after taking the Fong Wan Herbs. For further information regarding the above cases, the Transcript of the Federal Trade Commission Hearing, 304 pages, in book form, can be had free by calling at the office, or by mail, 25c to cover postage.
