some have designed a full height storage unit to come from floor to snack bar level. This provides shelf storage, concealed behind matching hemlock or fir doors, for big utensils, roasters, cookie and baking sheets and a variety of other items used often by the housewife. A smaller space beside the spice section puts the electric mixer within easy reach. It slides in and out at table level.

Not only is this a perfect workshop for the homemaker, but the husband with culinary instincts will like this wonderfully handy spot where he can work building a meal or a snack without bringing the wrath of friend wife on his head for cluttering up the whole kitchen.

When built of these softwoods, which can be easily cut and fit into any space, personal design ideas of the housewife may be injected into her domain. No two women want the same kitchen any more than any two women want the same hat.

There is one other outstanding feature of these kitchens which holds particular attraction for the housewife and that is the wide variety of colors and finishes which can be used with these wood installations. If she likes color, she can paint or stain these woods to get any desired effect, or if she prefers the blond, golden colors of natural woods, she can merely have them lacquered, varnished or waxed to suit her tastes. She may even use an antique finish, brushing on white or tints and wiping them off then applying a varnish coating or two.

GRANDMOTHER never had it so good.
