ones lined up the tower in his camera. There was the sound of splintering steel; a gasp from the group of workmen at the base of the tower.

The "gin" pole supporting the steeple snapped; there was a tearing of cables. The steeple toppled slowly outward, dragging Stanbridge with it.

Jones followed the falling steeple with his camera. His dramatic picture showed Stanbridge riding the steeple to his death, 175 feet below.

The steeple was under construction for the Hunter Str. Baptist Church, in the Central Park residential area.

Stanbridge, of Bangor, Ala., was one of the three workmen at the top of the tower. The others were unhurt.
