A He didn't find definite occupational exposure.

Q Okay. So 20 percent. That is one out of five?

A Yes, sir.

Q Are you aware of other epidemiologic or other studies that have found a higher rate or percentage of mesothelioma cases where there is no known asbestos exposure?

A Well, actually Dr. McDonald himself did one earlier.

Q That would be the one from the '70s?

A Looking at the same group of people in North America in 1970s, and at that time it was only about 50 percent of the cases, or slightly more than 50 percent of the cases, that had asbestos exposure in their history.

The difference between his first study and second study was probably a number of factors, and one important factor would probably be just the time period that in the 1980s there were more cases of
