I discussed the nature of this case with atty Al Morse who advises we have 2 cases: a state WC claim and a Longshoremen & Harbor workers case. The WC case has greater value for a federal standpoint- 300 K vs 80K state. Al believes the majority of the medical evidence will show the Utah Kaiser Steel is when the most injurious exposure was. However the law states the last employer causing injurious exposure will pay the claim. It is possible the use of asbestos ~~for~~ at the plant wasn't serious enough to cause 'injurious exposure', especially considering the latency period it takes for the asbestos condition to manifest
