Limit eating Mississippi River fish

ST. PAUL (UPI) — Consumption of fish taken from the Mississippi River between the Twin Cities and Lake Pepin should be limited to one meal a week because of high levels of the industrial chemical, polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs), warns Dr. Warren R. Lawson, Minnesota health commissioner.

Recent samplings of carp and other rough fish has shown levels of PCBs above the 5 parts-per-million action level suggested by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration. //
