plicated new issues of war, man, supply, finance, base and operate a totally new kind of military establishment which would face extraordinary difficulties of language, training and customs.

Exactly how this country might enter into agreement to use its own land, sea and air strength only in collaboration with other nations is a problem which has to be worked out as part of the much broader question of how the Nation may join a world council. One possibility is to have Congress approve such use of force in principle and then decide each case as it arises in accordance with the principle.
