Attached story about PCB discharges at Anniston was based on an article in Chemical Engineering, December 13, page 126. (We don't have a copy of the article here.) Other items in the article were based on other sources, primarily Monsanto news releases.

I told Jim Turner at MCA, to whom I talked, that we had discontinued PCB manufacture at Anniston, but were continuing to make biphenyl there. I told him, also, that although the article is garbled I did not expect it would do any harm and there was no reason to do a correction. If you disagree, we can go back to him.

Incidentally, he said that Jack Garrett screens Chemecology prior to publication.
