Printers' Ink magazine called him "the most expert of the authorities"

them, a woman cook, jumped from the second floor

The fire was first noticed by the night duty nurse who heard a crash and, running downstairs, found the ground floor filled with smoke and fire.

In addition to being locked, the patients' rooms had unbreakable window panes.

Five fire brigades were alerted but when they arrived the building was fully ablaze.

Cause of the explosive fire could not be determined immediately. The staff said it seemed to have started in the ground-floor living room.
