Like Motherhood and Love, every survey reveals a healthy demand for Technical Information.

However, in most cases those who respond affirmatively are a little vague as to what specific fields of technology hold their interest, so it makes it difficult to provide them with the material which will be of greatest value and use.

It would be helpful, therefore, if a bit more guideline material could be provided as to what definite technical material will get greatest interest and possibly put the most dollars in readers' pockets.
