ONLY BONAFIDE RESIDENTS WILL GET ROAD JOBS

Meek Tells Policy Of New Highway Work Camps

(By U. P. Leased Wire to The Star)

SACRAMENTO, Oct. 31.—Only bonafide California residents will be selected for the 2000 highway building jobs to be created by the state as a means of relieving unemployment, B. B. Meek, director of public works, has announced.

Meek's statement came as the result of reports from neighboring states that a movement of unemployed men to California had already started in order to obtain highway employment here.

No person will be employed who cannot first establish the fact of his bona fide residence in California, Meek said.

"All employment for the eight road camps which we hope to establish within the next three weeks will be handled through the free employment agencies maintained by the state," said Meek. "It is planned that men thus employed will be equally divided between northern and Southern California."

Free transportation of unemployed men from cities to the new road camps appeared likely today as negotiations with railroads toward a co-operative agreement were continued.

The work is being financed, according to Meek, from savings made on contracts and accumulated through the progressive reduction of overhead costs on state highway expenditures.
