NEWSCASTER: Forty-nine workers in General Electric plants in Hudson Falls and Fort Edwards picked up skin ailments during the past fifteen years that have been traced by doctors to the industrial chemical known as PCB, and sixteen others suffered noxia, dizziness and eye, ear or lung irritation that may also have been caused by the chemical, but the company continues to deny that PCB is a health hazard to humans or wildlife. The cases of skin ailments were outlined yesterday at a State Environmental Conservation Department hearing in Albany. The department wants to prevent GE from dumping the chemical into the Hudson River.
