INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITS

Santa Clara County Fair's commercial and industrial exhibits this year will surpass any in the ninth annual event's history in size and variety.

The huge tent, traditionally 490 feet long and 100 wide, this year will assume an even longer length, with 60 feet added to the west end. The addition was made necessary because a record 142 exhibitors have signed up for space.

The 142 does not include 22 separate farm implement exhibits which will be on display in an adjacent area under a streamered net which protects the visitors and machinery from sun and heat.

Inside the tent, all the colorful, attractive displays of Santa Clara County's leading commercial and industrial firms will draw an estimated 92 per cent of all those who visit the Tully Road fairgrounds. Last year that many said they had walked through the section, indicating it "pulls" the highest attendance of any unit in the fair.

It is little wonder the industrial tent is the favorite of all, for in addition to many free souvenirs, exhibitors also display their wares in such a way the fairgoer can see, smell, touch, operate, hear and inspect — a privilege rarely accorded the visitor to a store or factory.

As an example of the many exhibits, there will be Eddie Gelund, one of America's three Corsican glass blowers. Here is
