pervisor for the War Food Administration (FWA) in San Jose, sought to take into custody thirteen Mexican contract laborers for asserted violation of their contracts.

Charges against the Mexicans were made by C. E. Blanchard, a neighbor, who claimed Pete Scaglotti induced thirteen of his imported farmhands to leave his employ with promises of wine and higher wages.

MET WITH THREATS.

The Federal officers said that when they visited the Scaglotti ranch to arrest the Mexicans, they were met by August, who attempted to crowd their machine off the road with a farm truck. At the ranch house, they said, they were met by Pete, armed with a shotgun, who threatened to "shoot the whole bunch" if they did not leave. The irate rancher was disarmed by Investigator Montaye at gun point, but not arrested at the time.

The Mexicans later were taken into custody and removed to the deportation center at Sharp Park. A detail of Federal marshals was ordered to arrest both cousins.
