"Hood's Sarsaparilla is the best medicine in the world for cleansing the blood. We have taken it in the spring for years. One bottle does wonders in putting new life in us when we are all run down." MRS. FRANK GROVER, Gray, Me.

"I used to be troubled with boils and carbuncles every spring, but since using a bottle or so of Hood's Sarsaparilla each spring I am relieved of these troubles. The medicine also strengthens my system." PEARSON L. TEXTER, Hagersville, Pa.

rected in return," said the reverend author. "Were Dr. Watson here at present and able to pay a visit to the great natural flower gardens which make radiant the various parts of the peninsula, he would, if possible, pay an even greater compliment to place and people, for he is a man who knows how to say things, as well as to appreciate the beautiful. North Island is now a vast bed of blooming wild flowers, the hours much of the glorious golden poppy and the delicate pink border, whose purple coloring is said to be the despair of artists, but in fact, several hundred other specimens to be found at Coronado proper as well as on the island. Sea dahlias, of their yellow heads as if beckoning the wild spray which is their life, and the delicate sand verbena creeps along the shores, tempting grown folks and children alike to gather its fragrant clustering blossoms. The wild onion sends up its slender stem crowned with a cluster of lace-like lavender flowers, while purple and rarely pink larkspurs, wild clover, cream cups, tidy tips, and the pretty little gilia flowers, called by the Mexicans "venchitas" (tiny shells), are found in great abundance. What is commonly called "the poor house sun dial" is almost sure to escape the notice of those who are intent on gathering posies, for the sundial grows close to the earth, its wee little flowers of delicate coral coloring being usually hidden by the leaves of other plants. Toadflax, too, awaits those who seek the more minute things, while the wild hollyhock with its wonderfully pretty pink blossoms trails its flowery length among the more erect growing plants. Such vast plots of ground are covered by white forget-me-nots that one is tempted to fancy that the golden sun is shining from a sky of matchless blue upon a garden of snow.

Acres of sunflowers turn their faces heavenward, while just beside the plot made glorious by these little beauties of the field, great patches of wild heliotrope (Phacelia) shed a glow of color contrasting gorgeously with the gold. Near the white station the Indian paint brush revels in freedom, and black-eyed Susans (Encelia) swing close to the dull green foliage of Artimesia, or Southern Wood, hold the admiration of the observer. The wild clematis is already in seed, its downy clustering seed pods, resembling nothing so much as day old goslings, festoon the wild mahogany, or lemon berry bushes, dividing clinging vines with the wirey pods of the wild cucumber.

Twittering birds and humming insects whirr over the happy, flower laden, happy-hearted visitors, while occasionally a lizard darts across the path, or the face of a trap-door spider is discovered.

Standing amid the long stemmed lupines and looking beyond to the masses of blue, white, yellow and purple, with the blue cloud-flecked sky above and the great blue sea below, with sails of small boats gleaming in the distance, one is awed and speechless, spell-bound by the matchless beauty of it all, while he wonders if at last Fairy Land has not popped out of some lovely book and become "a really true story."

HOMEWARD BOUND.

Members of the normal school board, who have been here since Thursday, concluded their labors yesterday morning, discussing some other subjects the value of the kindergarten and gymnasium as departments in the state normal schools. The standard of admission to these institutions also came up for hearing.

Before dismissing yesterday the board passed a resolution of thanks to those who had assisted in making their stay so profitable and pleasant. They especially mentioned the Vodges and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Fletcher, for entertaining them so delightfully on the yacht Alert.

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

Mr. and Mrs. Bernard W. McKenzie left for Palm Springs yesterday morning. Mrs. McKenzie but recently arrived home from La Mesa where the greater part of the past few months has been spent, and her friends were in hopes her health would permit of her remaining among them, but the physician deems it best that his patient should be further away from the sea for the present.

Mr. Robert Waller of Cleveland, founder of the American Shipbuilding company, the largest institution of its kind on the Great Lakes, is stopping at the hotel, accompanied by a very happy family party. In the group are Mr. and Mrs. James C. Wallace, also James L. Wallace and Miss Lydia Wallace. Mr. Wallace, Sr., has abandoned active business life, his son James C. Wallace, taking his place. Just at present their company is building several fine ships for the Western Transit company (the Vanderbilt line), whose boats ply between Chicago and Buffalo.

Easter services will be held in all the local churches today. The floral decorations are said to be more elaborate this year than usual.

Mrs. W. H. Bentley, Mrs. G. L. Shaw and W. H. Bentley, Jr., are visiting at Long Beach and Pasadena this week.

A group of gentlemen on the Hotel del Coronado veranda yesterday afternoon, between puffs on good cigars, were discussing the styles in ladies' gowns, when one member of the congenial little group threw a bombshell by stating that he had read somewhere that the enormous sleeves popular a while ago, were again to be worn this summer. "Alas," exclaimed one of the party, as he slowly knocked the ashes from his half burned cheroot, "I had a most embarrassing experience one evening at a dance given by a well known Los Angeles society woman, and the great fluffy sleeve of a sweet little maid to whom I was devoted at that time was the cause of it all. Here the little man ceased speaking and became thoughtful. No one ventured to spoil his reverie, which no doubt included memories of a sweet maid, great sleeves and a sad experience, all in one. Presently he came back to earth and continued: "I was crossing the ball room in company with my hostess' guest when another of her gentlemen friends hastened to my companion's side, exclaiming, 'Pray let me be your escort.' When the lady returned, I became visible from behind the herculean sleeve. It is the truth when I say I never felt so small in all my life," and no tiniest cigar was hurled to the ash pans with such vim that no one would doubt that big sleeves were fairly abhorred. Others present had their antipathy sleeve say, having no doubt whatever as to the wearer's revival of the style would receive from them. Let the gentlemen take notice, for it has been ascertained that there really no need of alarm, authorities on the subject maintaining that sleeves are to be kept within modest bounds during the present year of grace.
