Dear Bob:

We here are quite pleased at the response accorded our numerous invitations to share in a long continued feature series on "Research and Training Centers in Occupational Health." While all returns are not in, those who have responded are pleasingly enthusiastic.

As you surmised, we certainly do not need all copy immediately. If we can just get two or three manuscripts in order to start off this series we will not be concerned about having the entire lot before us. Knowing how busy you are let it be said that if we can count on your copy by February 1, that ought to work out satisfactorily all around. We here could work up the Ann Arbor story immediately, but I am too close to the Institute here for that to be made the lead off item in this series. I wish to push that one into the second half of the series. It is likely that Jean Dalton will furnish us with early copy. Then if we can procure the Milan copy in short order we will be able to get under way, gambling that with such a start we can keep the flow alive.

So, not until February 1 will we be watching for the arrival of your own good piece.

Appreciatively,

Carey P. McCord
