Flagstone Depends on Soil

Laying flagstones is one of those projects that most do-it-yourselfers never hesitate to tackle.

When the ground is firm and there is no drainage problem flagstones can be set right into the ground without a sub-base. But when the ground is not too firm and the drainage is only fair, set the flagstones into a two-inch bed of sand.

Should the drainage be very poor dig to a depth of 12 inches plus the thickness of the flagstone. Fill 10 inches with gravel and two inches with sand, then set the stones into the sand.

In either of these methods pack the dirt solidly around each stone to hold it securely in place.

Don't assume that the flagstones are set properly. Stand on each one after you put it down and be sure that it doesn't rock. Check after a few days of use and reset each stone that appears to have moved its position.
