fingers and toes or his either. There must be half a hundred of them downtown.

Q Just in the downtown area?

A Just in the downtown area.

Q Do you know how many jobs Mr. Vandergucht worked on? Would it be about the same?

A I would say the same thing. Jean has got the same amount of time in plastering that I got in it.

I started in 1946 right after I come out of the service after the war and Jean was -- and I met Jean in '49 or '50, and he -- all the way up until he died and all the way up until I retired he has worked on plastering jobs.

Q Probably would be pretty hard to sit down and try to remember all of them, huh?

A It certainly would. That is what I am trying to say to him. You can't remember all of that stuff, just like that -- when they had me up there and them 13, 14 people up there hollering at me and this and that, get me so I couldn't remember nothing.
