
Our living room draperies were a major purchase. That's why we went to Window Wonderland where we knew we'd get expert advice and the right price. With their help we chose a special see-through homespun weave which filters the sun but still lets us enjoy our view. For privacy at night there is the cascading striped boucle with matching covered cornice.

For us, and for entertaining, this is the greatest refrigerator-freezer in the world, and we discovered it at Ets-Hokin and Galvan. A General Electric Americana with custom dispenser which automatically fills your glass with ice, or chilled water at a touch. In it you can have a whole supermarket of fresh and frozen foods. And the other conveniences? No defrosting in either refrigerator or freezer. Rolls out on wheels for easy cleaning or redecorating. Has adjustable door shelves, easy to clean. I chose the Americana in Avocado, but it also comes in Coppertone, Harvest, and White.

Carter is the musician in our family, but he swears even I can learn to play this Wurlitzer organ from Abinante. Carter is, as usual, impressed with those solid state silicon transistors, but I'm fascinated with the Wurlitzer producing those four families of organ tone: string flute, reed and diapson. Other features are two full 61-note keyboards and direct plug-in for earphones and external speakers. The Wurlitzer comes in high fashion furniture styles which blend with every decor. We chose the Italian Provincial Walnut.

The only way for Carter and I to agree on color is to compromise. So far our compromises have turned out to be more satisfactory than our individual choices. Here, at Sherwin-Williams, we have a color dispenser to help us with our compromises, a whole rack of color charts with swatches big enough so there won't be any misunderstanding. Another added feature is that Sherman-Williams mixes paints right there while you wait, and offers you one of the finest selections of wallpapers in town.
