31-24 FOOD IN CANADA
MO. 6,800 (CAN.)

DEC 1975

CLIPPED BY BACONS

1800

Despite the worries of the Great Lakes commercial fishing industry, no hard evidence of serious PCB (polychlorinated biphenyl) levels has been discovered in major commercial fish species, G. G. Anderson, acting director of Environment Canada's Fisheries and Marine Service Inspection Branch, reports. Still to be determined is the question of what levels are safe for human consumption. Ontario has warned anglers to eat no more than one coho salmon meal a week. //

MONS 086564