...# 1954 Race Against General Marshall Over Phillip Jessup Integrity

hopes of riding the Republican party to victory through the selfish exploitation of fear, bigotry, ignorance and intolerance. There are enough mistakes of the Democrats for Republicans to constructively criticize without resorting to political smears . . .

". . . It is high time we stopped being fools and victims of totalitarian techniques . . ."

The gray-haired Mrs. Smith is running for re-election this year. Only opponent to announce against her so far in the Republican primary is Robert L. Jones, a personal friend of McCarthy's.

Jones has said that Smith will be the basis of his fight against Mrs. Smith. He defines his term:

"Americanism consists of McCarthyism. McCarthyism represents to me the ferreting-out of Communists."

TOUGHEST FIGHT

The toughest of McCarthy's early fights in the Senate was the effort to unseat him.

On Aug. 6, 1951, Sen. Benton, Democratic successor to Baldwin, introduced a resolution calling for an investigation to determine whether expulsion proceedings should be instituted. Benton charged with a violation of the Senate's investigation of Benton.

The results were embodied in another report of an elections subcommittee.

McCarthy refused throughout to testify before the committee. Benton testified twice, once during investigating of himself and once when the subcommittee was delving into McCarthy's activities.

On Sept. 28, 1951, Benton appeared before the committee and in a long statement cited 10 cases in which he accused McCarthy of lying, of accepting money" and of practicing fraud and deceit upon the Senate.

Benton specifically waived his senatorial immunity both before the committee and later. Subsequently McCarthy filed a two-billion-dollar libel suit against him, but when trial neared, early this year, McCarthy dropped the matter.

McCarthy said he couldn't prove he had been damaged because he couldn't find anyone who believed Benton's charges. Benton said 2,000 persons had written him that they would volunteer to say they believed the charges.

GROUP STATEMENT

In the end, the three-man subcommittee investigating McCarthy said the matter transcended partisan politics "and goes to the very core of the Senate body's authority, integrity and the respect in which it is held by the people of this country."

The subcommittee raised a series of questions which it said only McCarthy could answer. Since he had refused to appear, it said it could do nothing but report the matter to the Senate without recommendation.

The subcommittee said McCarthy sat during the 80th Congress on committees which had jurisdiction over the Reconstruction Finance Corp. and the housing agencies.

One of the interested parties appearing before the subcommittee was the the Lustron Corp., which was indicted to RFC. Lustron paid McCarthy $10,000 for an article on housing.

The subcommittee asked whether there was any connection between sale of the article and McCarthy's recommendation for government aid to housing privateers.

It found that McCarthy had sold 1,000 shares of Seaboard Air Line railroad stock for a net profit of $35,614.75 and that he still held 650 shares.

It asked whether there was a relationship between McCarthy's position on the Banking Committee and "his receipt of confidential information relating to the stock of the Seaboard Air Line Railroad, which was indebted to RFC for sums in excess of $15,000,000?"

The subcommittee asked, too, whether any of the funds received by McCarthy to fight communism had been diverted to his own use. McCarthy said "no" in a letter, but the subcommittee noted he had not made himself "available for further explanation."

The subcommittee asked the source of $17,600 reported as contributed by relatives to McCarthy in 1944 for his unsuccessful primary campaign against Sen. Alexander Wiley. These relatives did not appear to have that much money.

It wanted to know whether the $17,600 was in reality McCarthy's own money and, if so, was he in violation of state law setting a $5,000 limitation on personal campaign expenditures?

DENOUNCES REPORT

McCarthy denounced the subcommittee's report as a "new low in dishonesty and smear" and denied the subcommittee to chal[lenge] his seat. There was no challenge.

As for the Benton investigation, the subcommittee found he had improperly accepted a $600 contribution from an ex-RFC member for campaign funds but called the charges "moot" since he no longer was in office.

The question immediately [arose] in connection with Benton's 1952 defeat was whether McCarthy contributed materially.

Benton said in an interview in New York, "My state chairman, John Bailey, thinks McCarthy had a small effect, possibly a few thousand votes. This was inconsequential when you consider that my margin of defeat was about 70,000."

EISENHOWER STRONGEST

"I think the best explanation is that Eisenhower was the strongest factor in my state as in many others. I was defeated in the general swing to him.

"It is my opinion that I got more votes in Connecticut because of the charges against me than I lost because of that stand."

Benton said that in 1952 McCarthy went into five states where the man he opposed turned out to be the winner — Washington, Missouri, Montana, West Virginia and New Mexico.

The former Connecticut senator added that in the other states in which McCarthy appeared in 1952 "the Democratic candidates for the Senate did better than could be expected."

In those 10 states McCarthy was campaigning on behalf of the party ticket, rather than to support individuals.

Monterey Moves To Ease Traffic Snarl

Purchase of several feet of property on the northeast corner of the Washington street-Del Monte avenue intersection to ease a traffic problem was directed last night by the Monterey City Council.

The action was highly praised today by Police Chief Charles E. Simpson who said, "rounding off" of that corner will correct one of the worst traffic problems in the city."

Simpson said traffic piles up badly on Del Monte avenue at rush hours when a heavy flow of cars turns right at the corner. "And the problem becomes worse when a big traffic operator tries to turn and stymies another there," he added. "because the truck has to swing wide to negotiate the turn and then often completely snarls traffic at the intersection."

Purchase price and remodeling expense to a service station at the corner will cost the city about $2,000, City Manager Walter Hahn, Jr., said.
