In Washington. All Government departments were closed, and those officials who were not on speaking tours devoted the day to rest. President Wilson remained indoors most of the day, but Monday night he went to a theater.

Director-General McAdoo issued an order that railroad employees be permitted to participate in celebration of the day where essential operations would not be hampered.

Director-General Schwab of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, in a cablegram to the American troops in France, gave those forces assurances that everything possible was being done by that industry.

President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor, now abroad, in a message to the American people pledged the fullest support of organized labor to the cause of the republic.

5880 STARS IN PRINTERS' SERVICE FLAG

San Francisco.—Never before was Labor day in San Francisco celebrated by such a picturesque and patriotic parade as that of Monday. Never before were its battalions marshaled in such military style, nor was ever their reception so military.

Among the tens of thousands of spectators that lined the sidewalks and cheered the marchers were thousands of California's finest sons in the navy blue or army khaki of Uncle
