Rotary Club Speaker Says Force Alone Won't Preserve Peace

Because man's moral and spiritual development has not kept pace with scientific and technological advances, present day man is like a three-year-old boy turned loose with a "tommygun," the Rev. V. O. Ward told his fellow members of the Rotary club and their guests at Thursday's luncheon meeting, Casa Munras.

He stressed the vital need for a moral basis underlying post-war international relationships, rather than reliance upon armed strength of a world police force, and appealed for genuine effort to break down prejudice and emotional barriers in order to achieve understanding among peoples.

FAREWELL MEETING

Carmel Martin, chairman of the day, announced that Mr. Ward was making his farewell appearance as a member of the local club prior to leaving for San Francisco where he will on May 1 become canon-chancellor of the Episcopal Diocese of California with headquarters in Grace Cathedral. He has been rector of St. Mary's-by-the-Sea in Pacific Grove for the last three years.

Referring to Rotary International's program of fostering better understanding among peoples of various countries, Mr. Ward declared the only way such a program could accomplish its purpose was by inculcation of similarly broad ideals among the individuals of this and other communities. So long as individuals are swayed by prejudice, he said, nations can not hope to escape like limitations.

MORAL BASIS NEEDED

He pointed out that other countries will probably not accept gratefully the domination of the United States or any other great power after the war but will want to work out their own destinies, so that reliance upon arbitrary force will eventually lead to further wars. Only by education along lines of international good will and cooperation can future disaster be avoided.

In conclusion he cited the decision reached by a meeting of 500 educators assembled recently at Columbia university in New York, representing all types of religious and non-religious institutions of learning, suggesting elements of a vital religion for the moral rehabilitation of modern men as follows:

"It must be based on abiding reality—God; it must establish rapport, or be in accord, with the scientific method; it must minister to all of life and human experience; it must be grounded in history; it must deal with man as a sinner standing in need of salvation; it must seek the moral control of the whole of the present world, and it must be geared to an eternal world.

"It is only from existing communions that this vital religion can come," he declared in closing.

The Rotary meeting was marked by attendance of members' wives as guests and was followed by bridge and other entertainment, of which Fred Godwin was in charge, assisted by a committee of ladies.

OVER 200 representatives from 27 GIRL SCOUT TROOPS participated in the ceremonies on the stage of the Walter Colton school auditorium last Saturday, when money the Scouts had gathered was turned over to the Juliette Lowe World Friendship Fund. The colorful performance was worked out by Mrs. Milferd Anderson, chairman, Miss Marie Von Kanel, executive secretary, and the leaders of the various Scout troops.

Fighting French Shown in Film

The Fighting French are on the march in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's stirring story of a group of French soldiers who carried on the fight against Germany from the depths of a Nazi prison camp. The all-male cast of the film, "The Cross of Lorraine," which opens Sunday at the Rio theatre, is headed by Jean Pierre Aumont, the fighting Frenchman who escaped to this country after the fall of France, and made two movies before returning to fight again with the forces of General de Gaulle.

The film deals with a specific outfit of French prisoners composed of men from various walks of life. After the Armistice they are promised freedom by the nazis but instead find themselves herded to a prison camp. There they are subjected to brutal treatment by their captors. Peter Lorre, a nazi sergeant, sets out to break their spirits. But he doe. not succeed due to the efforts of such men as Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Aumont, Joseph Calleia and Richard Whorf. However, he does win out in the case of Gene Kelly, the toughest and bravest of them all.

NEW YORK, April 21 — President Roosevelt recently endorsed an observance under mixed religious auspices, Protestant, Catholic and Jewish, of Home Week, or if you like, Family Week. In doing so, he ran over the list of familiar virtues of the home and of the family as the basic unit of civilization. It was one paper of his with which no opponent of his administration could find the slightest fault.

It is a pity, however, that this institution should be in need of propaganda and promotion for revival because until the war began to disrupt homes, ours was a country in which the home and the family enjoyed the most favorable conditions.

The subject is a touchy one for, at last reports, one marriage in six ended in divorce but divorce means broken homes and those who study delinquency among children and examine the records of convicts in the prisons have found that a high percentage of their clients came from broken homes. They suspected that disruption of the home by divorce had been rather more, than less, responsible for the waywardness of the children.

It is acknowledged to be a tragedy when the father or mother of a family is removed from a home by death but, out of consideration for the feelings of the many parties to our many divorces by which children are denied the care and guidance of one parent, usually the father, we read little consideration of these tragedies.

The clergy touch up the subject now and again but that is the end of it; nor have I any helpful suggestion. Yet the fact remains that the home has suffered terrible damage in the divorce courts, in many cases for frivolous reasons, and we have seen some states of the union devising laws so as to attract divorce trade for the benefit of the keepers of hotels and saloons, gambling houses and dress shops.

In this time of war, the home ties are put to a much greater strain. Some youngsters marry in haste and under emotional influ-
