THE COURT: Plaintiffs, do you have anything you want to put on?

MR. SHELLENBERGER: Mr. Smith would like to read some more documents.

MS. TOSTANOSKI: I object.

(Whereupon, laughter ensued.)

THE COURT: Ms. Hines, do you have anything?

MS. HINES: No.

THE COURT: Everybody is done, and we finished that on Thursday of last week.

I would like to, then, speak with counsel if counsel have no objection. Privately.

I will discharge the jury. There is no sense keeping them in here.

We will even let them keep their money. Darn. I wondered, nobody made any candy contributions this morning. Where is the candy? Take it away from them.

MR. IGNATOWSKI: I want to get a piece before you take it away.
