The Occupational Safety and Health Standards were published in the Federal Register on May 29, 1971 and are now available. You are urged to get copies of these standards and get your plant in compliance with them, if you have not already done so. Attached, you will find a list of cities in which the OSHA offices are located so that you may locate the office in the nearest city to your operation. Copies of the Standards possibly may be obtained at one of these offices. Contact your Department of Labor office for information as to the OSHA office address.
