them because they were helpful in getting me some of the illustrations for the book.

Q Other than Johns-Manville, were there any non-members that you recall sending a single copy of booklet to?

A I think we might have made them available to licensees as well as active members. They were available to any member that wanted them.

Q Were they forwarded to any government agency?

A We might have. I -- I really can't recall.

Q Who determined the distribution of the booklet?

A That was determined by the number of orders that came in for it.

Q Well, you didn't receive an order from Johns-Manville for it, did you?

A No. But they were instrumental in getting information together.

Q So setting aside --

A So they probably got a copy of it.

Q Setting aside the orders you would receive from members, who determined who else if anyone would get copies?

A If anybody from the general public wrote in for one they got a copy.
