the actual part itself and determine who manufactured the product.

THE COURT: Isn't that sort of a classic kind of a factual scenario that is up to the trier of the fact to resolve? Not for the Court.

MR. WILLIAMS: I am not persuaded on that point, Your Honor.

THE COURT: It is not for me to substitute my judgment for that of the trier of fact.

It is up to the jurors to make that decision. So I am going to permit them to do that.

MR. WILLIAMS: Okay, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Number 4 is the negligence question.

Number 5 is the strict liability question.

Number 6 is the compensatory damages, and compensatory damages relate to three items. The first are the funeral expenses which are limited to $3,500.

I don't believe they reached that figure in Mr. Wood's case. I think they were what, $1,900?

MR. IGNATOWSKI: I know they were below the
