

gunfire on the Habomai islands off Hokkaido's eastern tip has created mounting fears among Japanese, a national police reserve officer said.

Minoru Yamada, head of the police reserve's Sapporo district headquarters, said Soviet searchlights light up homes on the east-island. Police reserves are training with bazookas and mortars in Hokkaido's interior to avoid provoking Russian patrol crafts, Yamada disclosed.

He said the issuance of heavier weapons to the police reserves was not related to difficulties with the Russians.
