Dr. G. P. Rouse, Jr.,
2031 Locust Street,
Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

Dear Dr. Rouse:

I find somewhat to my embarrassment that I have not sent you a copy of our report of the analyses of blood samples on [REDACTED], as supplied to us by Dr. Reinhold. Accordingly I hasten to supply you with this report. You will note that one of the samples was badly contaminated, but the other two gave results that were in essential agreement. It appears that Mr. [REDACTED] had had very little lead absorption in the period shortly before the collection of these samples. I was disappointed that we did not receive the sample of urine, but I understand that the developments in this case have been such as to indicate that lead poisoning need not be considered in the diagnosis.

At your convenience, no doubt, you will be returning to us the containers supplied for the collection of other samples. If for any reason you wish to hold them for use in the near future, do not hesitate to do so, but we should prefer not to have them out of the Laboratory for any prolonged period, since our demand for them is even greater than we can supply.

Cordially yours,

Robert A. Kehoe, M. D.
