Sweet Music

THE visitor stepped into the big barn and gazed with interest at the long row of stalls filled with sleek cows. It wasn't what he saw but what he heard, however, that brought an exclamation from him.

"Why, you've got a radio for them!" "Sure," grinned his escort. "We think every cattle barn should have a radio." Karl Mueller, one of the owners of a dairy herd in Arlington, Minn., says music not only keeps his cows happy but helps condition them for competition in big cattle shows. But the music must be either "sweet" or symphonic.

Mueller's discovery that music can be as soothing as a good mash came one afternoon when he moved a radio into the barn to listen to a football broadcast while working.

"A musical program followed the game and I noticed the cows seemed quieter than usual," Mueller related. "I put the radio on again at milking time and found that the cows were more relaxed and that they definitely milked more easily. We've used the radio continually ever since."

The Cultured Bovines Have Responded Particularly Well to the Symphonies of Mozart and Debussy, and Enjoy the Songs From "Oklahoma."

So essential did the Muellers consider music that before taking their cattle to the State Fair they wrote for permission to install a radio in their section. Officials replied it would be all right, providing the Mueller radio was kept tuned low so as not to disturb other animals.

The musical milkmen say their tests have established that their bossies become restless when jitterbug selections come on. They don't like jumping jive. But they fairly ooze contentment when it's a good variety of "sweet" music or a smooth classical number. Mozart and Debussy rank high among the symphonic masters favored by the cultured bovines.

A Wagnerian opera, however, produces only uneasiness and gloom among the sensitive stall occupants. But light, gay selections, such as songs from "Oklahoma!" "The Merry Widow" and "South Pacific," are well received.

THAT other members of the animal kingdom also have their musical preferences and prejudices has long been known.

Polly, a Brazilian parrot owned by Michael Kramer of Columbia, S. C., loves opera and picked up favorite arias like a diva. She has learned the scores of nine different musical dramas, according to her master. But for relaxation Polly pitches into "Deep in the Heart of Texas."

Experiments at the London Zoo some years ago showed that most of the occupants seemed to like music of one kind or another, but that some hated all forms of it. The rhinoceros was so irritated that he charged the musicians. Sea lions showed keen delight over everything but jazz. Crocodiles, long maligned as a cold-blooded lot, climbed right up on the bank and listened to every number.
