Kinsmen of Jesus, His natically violent, Caesar's scribed with the new prayed until dawn began rushing mighty wind, and silvering the walls of the upper room.

They sound from Heaven as of a rushing mighty wind, and they were sitting. And there appeared unto them cloven tongues like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them. And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost.

It was sunrise of Sha- about, celebrating the mo- ment when God blazed His law into the rock of Mt. Sinal, a time of thanksgiv- ing, of inbringing of the first fruits, the 50th day after Passover—Pentecost—the spirit had ended. They could go to work.

Roving about the lamplit courtyard, Peter counted 120. Only these remained of the multitudes that once had rallied to Jesus. And questions lined their brows. Fear pinched their voices. "What news hast thou?" Neighbors set forward our calamity."

To be sure there was land seethed with clan- destine societies, some fa-

Peter sent the widow's young son, John Mark, to fetch Matthew and Nathanael from the gate for the business at hand. In the distance, cries of the Roman guard posted for the night's first watch threaded along the city wall.

"Brethren," Peter began. They shuffled closer, their dark upturned faces converging below him. They might well be disappointed at his purpose. It could do little to dispel their shrinking inertia.

"Brethren, the Scripture had to be fulfilled. . . concerning Judas who was however slight. They had begun to act.

The 12 climbed to their lodgings in the upper room and spread their rugs about the floor. But none slept. A restless animation pervaded them, and they gave themselves over to prayer.

Again 12

Once more, the Apostles were 12. Somehow, by that step, Peter felt that the hard, dreary waiting had dissolved into a new stage. They had made a decision. They had done something. They had begun to act.

Hanged Himself

The betrayer, Judas Iscariot, guilt-stricken by his deed, had hanged himself, and after his shunned body burst, it was buried in potter's field. Refilling the ranks of the 12 would be a mere organizational matter.

But it was something, better than standing still. Peter gazed about the shadowy crowd, waiting for a name to be put forward. It had to be someone front among the 70 Jesus had chosen personally to share his ministry.

"Joseph!" a voice rang out. "Joseph surnamed Justus."

Candidates

Peter nodded. Matthew took his stylus and scratched the name on a clay fragment and dropped it into a beaker. After a parked car in Deer Flat time, another candidate was called out. "Matthias, the gift of Jehovah."
