Dear Bob:

The Manufacturing Chemists Association having decided to publish a data sheet on lead oxide, the request came to us some time ago through the National Lead Company to assume this rather thankless job, and we have done the greater part of it. However, in discussing it with Girard Cranch, I learned that George Gehrman wanted to prepare the section on Health Hazards and I was only too glad to turn this over to him.

Gehrman has now submitted the 5-page draft of which I am sending you, confidentially, a copy herewith, as I am most anxious to have your comments on it. Points to which I wish to call your particular attention are those I have numbered marginally and are as follows:

- Page 2. 1. Would you consider the lead line a
"usually expected symptom"?
2. Is this statement strictly true?
3. I have verified the correctness of this quotation, but, with due respect to the author, it strikes me as very confused and I wish it could be reworded.
4. Is it wise to state an "upper limit of normal" in a document such as this?

Page 3. 5. How about smoking?

Page 4. 6. Is not a physical examination as often as once a month asking a good deal?

7. This one is just a matter of English.
There should obviously be an "and" in place of the comma.

I hope you will be good enough to let me hear from you on this as soon as you conveniently can.

Sincerely,
