My dear Mrs. Menkin:

I have a position which it seems possible you might be equipped to fill. We are planning to make an investigation of the general medical and biological effects of zinc and zinc salts which will occupy the next couple of years. We are in need of someone who can help technically, not only with the actual experimental work, but also with the compilation of literature, preparation of reports, etc.

Will you be good enough to send me the details of your previous work in chemistry, physics, etc., so that I may form some notion of your equipment, and also let me know whether, by any chance, you can take dictation and type. What we need is someone who can act as a general secretary for this investigation and in periods when there is little or no literary work to do, help with experimental problems.

Very truly yours,
