Dear sir;

I am returning to you, via express, the bottles which you sent me and which I have filled with soil samples. Enclosed is a list, showing the amount of each.

You will note, on the list, that I am sending soil from Monaco and San Marino, which are, in themselves, unimportant, however, the soils are representative of Southern France and North Central Italy, respectively, and, as such, should be of use to you.

I have two requests to make of you, with regard to this shipment. I would like to know where specimen jars, such as those now enroute to you, may be obtained, and what is the approximate cost. They are very well suited to display jars and I think I shall get some if you will tell me where.

Two of my correspondents who furnished this soil, asked me for analyses. The one is from Tangier, Morocco, and the other is from Grenada. I would appreciate it very much if you would send me a complete analysis of these two sails so that I may forward them to these gentlemen.

Sincerely,
John V. O'Reilly
