Gentlemen:

You have each seen the other's criticisms and reply and each will be published as you have seen them. There will be no comments from the editorial staff of this Journal as we have never had editorials and prefer not to embark upon them.

We are glad to oblige authors in publishing material such as this, but we would suggest that if the argument in the minds of either of you is still unsettled and you wish to settle it, that such settlement be made outside and after the battle is over, the Journal would be glad to publish the results.

Sincerely-yours,

Philip Drinker
