

The right foundation

The right foundation for successful painting is B-H Paints—permanent pigments, a base consisting of a combination of pure carbonate of lead and oxide of zinc, ground in refined linseed oil. Quality paints throughout.

Cheap paint is never satisfactory, the colors fade quickly, the paint wears off.

Start right. Use the B-H kind straight through the job from priming coat to finished surface, and you'll get a lasting finish that is the best insurance for any wood work.

Made for over 40 years by the B-H Paint Co. of San Francisco. Sold everywhere as the "Paint of Perfection."

used, and none should be pulled from the plants the first year after seedling, but a large supply will be available the second season, and the hills will, as a rule, continue to produce satisfactory crops of stems for several years, after which they should be discarded and reset.

Strawberries should receive the same attention and treatment during winter as asparagus, and the plants should never be allowed to flower and seed. The roots may be brought into the greenhouse, pit, coldframe, or cellar during the winter, and forced.

By placing a barrel over a robust plant much longer and tender stalks may be grown.

This is one plant that does not thrive in warm climates. It is most popular, especially in the sections where it is grown, in the early part of the spring.

The use of rhubarb is particularly for making pies and sauces, and many housewives can the stems for winter use.

CHICKEN FENCE WIRE HANDY

Small Gardeners Will Find the Woven Two-Inch Mesh Valuable—Takes Place of Stakes

Many vegetable and flowering vines can be successfully grown on chicken fence wire. In the fall the wire can be taken down and used for succeeding years for similar purposes. It will enable the small gardener to raise more vegetables and flowers than if they were allowed to lie on the ground and spread out over valuable space.

Cucumbers, lima and climbing string beans, nasturtiums and numerous other vegetables of spreading variety, as well as almost any vine-growing plants can be successfully trained on the wire, trellis permitting of the use of the ground space ordinarily covered by vines being used for something else. Give the vine plants plenty of air and sunshine, and water when needed, and they will give an excellent accounting of themselves on the wire.

Annual Tulare county Christian Endeavor convention was held in Lodi, say April 21-22.

Miss Aolia Glass, daughter of prominent Contra Costa county pioneers, was instantly killed while watching her brother pull tree stumps on his ranch, three miles southeast of San Ramon. A heavy steel pulley, attached to a cable running from a tractor that the brother, A. W. Glass, was operating, slipped from its fastenings and fell back to the tractor, where the sister was standing. The heavy metal struck her, crushing her skull.

Strawberries, First Fruit of Season.

plantings should be so arranged that the larger growing trees such as apple, peach and pear will interfere the least with the cultivation of the smaller fruits or the vegetable garden. In some of the most successful home fruit gardens the larger trees are headed rather high, that is, 8 or 9 feet to the lower branches, and a row of small fruits are grown directly in the row of fruit trees. Between the rows of fruit trees, raspberries, blackberries, dewberries and strawberries are planted in rows which are about 5 or 6 feet apart. The vegetables are then grown in the space between these rows of berries. Peach trees are, as a rule, planted as fillers between apple and pear trees. Where the area is extremely limited the semi-dwarf varieties of apples are sometimes recommended. Care should be taken, however, to provide plenty of distance between the large-growing trees, say 40 to 45 feet for apples and 20 to 30 feet for peaches, pears and cherries.

Apples, peaches, cherries and plums may be planted as combination fruit and shade trees, and by heading them 5 to 7 feet above the ground, a lawn may be maintained underneath them. Plum trees are particularly adapted to planting in a poultry yard, but must be headed reasonably high and the trunks protected by wire netting until the trees are four or five years old.

Cooking Chicken.

Old saying is, no one can eat a quail a day for 30 days. H. J. Johnson, Baptist missionary in the Kingdom, hasn't tested the quail theory. But he ate chicken three times a day for two years.

Don't pity Johnson for monotony of diet.

Try his wife, who had to plan the meals to make them attractive. She evolved 22 ways of preparing chicken.

He was as a task as difficult as his wife has, in planning meals. Double H! Ask her.

peration effort that results and is to be served at the Friendly Inn Community Room.

Doubtless the confusion than from the serving of the large monthly dinner on April 20th.

At no time will meals be so and likely not another formal dinner for some time to come.

However, tea will be not requested—not in a spirit of action or commercialism, but for utility and friendliness.

The Friendly Inn Community is essentially a rest room, a room, a waiting or a meeting place. All are welcome and all are free to use it.

It was a primary object of the Inn was built, to operate a Community Center therein. We are but in fulfillment that expectation.

Persons desiring to use the room are not expected to buy tea. Small fund procured in this way enable the Inn to gain daily attention—and together with it agencies working for the advancement of it from going to wreck, to raise.
