Attention Mr. J. T. Griffis

Gentlemen:

In reply to your telegram of 7 August and your letter of 30 July 1958 regarding your insulating cloths, the following is advised:

a. It is understood, based upon advance information from the U.S. Naval Engineering Experiment Station, Annapolis, that both your styles #2090 and #AG-110 performed satisfactorily. As yet, no official report has been received from the Station. However, it is expected shortly.

b. You may solicit shipbuilders, based upon the above, with the provision that they submit requests for its use to the Bureau. Further, in the absence of any specification covering this material, its suitability under any order shall be verified against the samples which were found satisfactory under test No. 610431. This practice will be followed until such time as your materials are adequately covered by a government purchase specification. Tests for verification of material quality will be conducted at the U.S. Naval Engineering Experiment Station, Annapolis.
