THE paint that protects the hull of the steamship is not the same as the paint on the outside of the freight house. Different surfaces require different treatments. But they—and all other surfaces—may (and should) have one quality in common: The Sherwin-Williams quality—the right quality—the best for the purpose.

IF you know the paints and varnishes you are using on your house or in your home are made by the same maker in the same sure, careful, painstaking way as the paint used on iron bridges, steel buildings, railroad cars and automobiles, you will, we believe, have more confidence in them.

SHERWIN-WILLIAMS PAINTS & VARNISHES

Quality in paints and varnishes depends upon an infinite capacity for taking pains. One essential to quality is painting consistency. When a batch of Sherwin-Williams Paint is prepared and drawn off into cans, we know that the contents of each can are of the right proportions to produce the proper painting consistency. We do not take a chance on it. We weigh every package as it is filled. We know what each rightly proportioned paint ought to weigh. If a package runs over or under that weight, we know it is wrong. This costs more than hit-or-miss methods, but it makes better paint. This is the kind of painstaking detail that is exercised in every one of the plants of The Sherwin-Williams Co. in the manufacture of all their products to produce the right quality—the best for each purpose.
