DU PONT

A suggestive combination of Harrisons Town and Country Paints for the body and trim of a Dutch Colonial design house, with Harrisons Shingle Stain for the roof

GOOD HOMES

and How to Paint Them

WE seldom build more than one home in a lifetime, and we put into that home the very best material and equipment that we can afford. We go very carefully into the quality of the lumber that is to be used—it's to be our home, that we expect to live in for years to come; but do we look as closely into the quality of the paint that is to be put on this lumber—isn't it oftentimes a question of "looks" rather than "protection"?

Harrisons Town and Country Paint will give you the protection as well as the beauty—there are years of additional wear in it. It is not just an ordinary mixture of lead and oil, but one that is built on a formula with a reason for every pigment that goes into its manufacture.

If you are going to build this Summer, or intend re-painting, write for a copy of "Good Homes and How to Paint Them." In it you will find a suitable combination of colors for the type of house you are building and something on Harrisons Town and Country Paint—the house paint with the accumulated experience of a century and a quarter in the manufacture of paint products, as an assurance of its quality.
