Stop
vinyl chloride from being a dirty word

If you have the problem of monitoring vinyl chloride at your facility, Beckman has your solution: an ultra-sensitive Beckman infrared spectrophotometer that can monitor 50 ppm or less.

This gas analysis system was designed to meet the OSHA requirements for maximum allowable concentration of vinyl chloride in the working environment, as well as other toxic gases. Its capability is even more important since the disclosure that prolonged exposure to vinyl chloride or its constituents can lead to a rare form of cancer.

If vinyl chloride measurement is of concern to you, we can help. For further details, write or call us and ask for one of the following spectrophotometer experts:
