Dear Dr. Hardy,

Thank you for your letter of 9th May.

I am glad you found your visit here of some value, and I in turn was glad to make contact with you and your colleagues on the industrial side.

Since our meeting, I have been in touch again with the Fisheries Laboratory of M.A.F.F. in London (Whitehall Place) and have arranged for them to test Aroclor 1262 on trout in toxicity tests. They had not been able to do it before as insufficient material was available for a series of tests. However, I understand your company is supplying them with a quantity.

Analyses of the fish will also be made after the tests, to determine the level of residues accumulated in tissues. This will be of great value to us all, and the results will be made available to you.

Yours sincerely,

A. V. HOLDEN.
