is entirely too cautions with my painting contractor. I saw them eating lunch together many times. My specifications call for three coats of exterior paint and your inspector knows good and well that the painter applied only two coats. I am reporting this outrage to you and shall expect to take due and proper action to see that my rights as a taxpayer and voter are fully observed.—Mrs. I. E. H.

A.—In view of the fact that we have no laws or regulations covering the number of coats of paint recommend the uniform building code for a small town?—Elsinore Contractor.

A.—There are about 186 American cities now operating under the uniform building code. After carefully studying and investigating many building codes, I am fully convinced that the 1937 uniform building code is the latest and most consistent building code in existence. Consequently I do not hesitate in recommending the 1937 uniform building code for any town, city or county, regardless of size.
